

Helping Singer Equities' 16 platform companies address logistics opportunities as one.

Combined decentralized data into a single vision

Created buying leverage and demonstrated results

Consistent improvement to profit margin

KDL analytics show the way to shipping efficiency and better profit margins.

CHALLENGE

Singer Equities, a decentralized group of leading fabricators and distributors of hoses, conveyor belts, & gaskets seeks to add value while providing operating autonomy and minimizing disruption for its members. With each company making independent shipping decisions, Singer knew there was an opportunity for significant operational and profit improvement across the platform. The decentralized system provided no visibility to the granular shipping data necessary to do a combined assessment, and Singer did not want to push that task to the companies.

SOLUTION

The KDL team collected the necessary data from each of the companies with little effort on the part of internal shipping teams and no disruption of the operation. From that data, KDL built a set of analytics and dashboards which uncovered significant opportunity for improved efficiency, buying leverage, and dramatic savings on shipping costs across the platform. Singer implementing and easily integrating the KDL technology platform and gained a new level of ongoing visibility to the member businesses. The consolidation of data into platform dashboards helped greater understanding of the cost structure and created a tool that continues to evolve and drive better intelligence and decision making for Singer and its member companies.

RESULTS

Singer companies have consistently seen a significant improvement in profit contribution from shipping cost through the KDL program. Singer now has full visibility across all locations for all modes, and The KDL team has become integral to logistics discussions and decisions at Singer and the platform companies.

“KDL has been a huge resource. We are a distribution company, so shipping is critical. KDL gives us leverage through understanding our data, which helps us build cohesion internally. We are able to drill in and demonstrate impact - it creates more intelligent conversations and takes emotion out of decision making.”
